

Informative Open Day helps students make subject choices

Around 1,000 prospective students interested in attending the College came along to the Open Day held on Saturday January 14th, to find out about courses and facilities for September 2012 admission.

There were a number of formal presentations on a variety of subjects and informal drop-in sessions throughout the day where staff, students and tutors from around 75 different courses were available to answer questions from visitors.

College Principal Paul Wakeling gave four inspirational talks during the course of the event.

Visitors had the opportunity to attend up to five subject sessions. A planner with details of subject sessions was handed out on arrival, ensuring that visitors could make the most of the day.

Many commented on how useful and informative the sessions were and that attending the Open Day had helped make up their minds on subject choices.

This was the last Open Day the College will be holding before September 2012 admission, but if you would like to view the subject presentations that took place, please click here.
