

Needy families get some Christmas cheer from students' hampers

One of the great annual traditions at Havering Sixth Form College is the creation of Christmas Hampers for needy people – and this year caring students did themselves proud.

The festive hampers are put together by tutor groups who decorate a box and fill it with goodies and gifts.

These are then judged by staff and students to find the winner of the best decorated and created hamper, before being collected by The Romford Salvation Army who then distribute them to local disadvantaged families, elderly and single people.

Winners of the best hamper this year were students in tutor Cherie Schrod's Health and Social group and second place went to Sue Jacobs' tutor group.

Student Liaison Officer David Beesley, who organises the competition each year, said: "It's good for students to think of others less fortunate than themselves, particularly at this time of year."
