

Live TV broadcasts for students on RAVE visit

Eight first year BTEC Media National Diploma students attended a taster day at Ravensbourne College of Design and Communication (RAVE), in Chislehurst, Kent, in March.

The students were involved in producing content for a live TV broadcast based on a news item detailing the fictional fatal stabbing of a young person in the area.

They had to film and edit news reports and some were involved in 'doing time' in a mock-up of a cell with a real-life ex-con.

The students who took part in the visit were: Louis Clark, Georgia-Mae English, Teaghen Fraser, Aaron Johnson, Amy Powell, Ami-Jaye Matthews, Sam Morrow and Joy Williams.

Tutor Steve Harrington, College Co-ordinator for Creative Arts & Media, said: "The day was very intense and extremely productive, and all the students were pleased with their outcomes.

"The organisers were very impressed with our students and will be coming into Havering Sixth Form College in the next few weeks to talk further about higher education because quite a few of the group became converts to the idea of entering higher education in direct response to the visit."

RAVE is a leading higher education institution with a vocationally focused portfolio of design and communication courses, spanning fashion, television and broadcasting, interactive product design, architecture and environment design, graphic design, animation, moving image, music production for media and sound design.

It is currently based at Chislehurst, Kent, but is relocating to Greenwich Peninsula from May 2010.
